TAYLOR & FRANCIS GROUP LIBRARY EXCELLENCE AWARD IN RESEARCH

GUIDELINES FOR APPLICANTS

Purpose

To reward a higher degree by research student in their third or final year of study who has demonstrated excellent use of library resources.

Award and value of prize

1. $1,000
2. Receive personalised Library assistance to maximise the impact of your research including a metrics report and a strategy for publishing in high impact journals.

Eligibility

A higher degree by research student in their third or final year of study who has obtained outstanding success in their field. Higher degree by research students can self-nominate.

The application must include:

- Overview of research (200 words)
- Statement addressing how you have used UQ Library resources and services in your research and the impact this knowledge has had within your community at UQ (300 words)
- Supporting statement from their supervising UQ academic staff member (200 words).

Selection of award

The award recipient will be selected on the merit of their written application. The following criteria will be taken into consideration:

- Demonstrated link between library resources and research outcomes, for example posters, milestones, papers published
- Promoting Library resources and services to your peers and community
- Contributed to improving Library services and resources.

The selection panel will include:

- Director, Learning and Research Services, UQ Library
- Associate Director, Scholarly Communication and Repository Services, UQ Library

The selection of the successful recipient will be signed off by the Dean of the Graduate School.

Conditions of the award

- The award is open only to higher degree by research students in their third or final year
- The award will be presented at a Library event
- The recipients' name and details of their research will be published on the UQ Library website and will be used for promotional purposes.